

Jeff Shore & Jon Fisher: "Trailer"

By Troy Schulze, February 11, 2014

Multimedia artists Jeff Shore and Jon Fisher unveil their latest mind-blowing installation: an "automatic" movie. It's shot, edited, scored and screened all at once, in real time. On view through May 31 at McClain Gallery.

This you've got to see. Collaborators Jeff Shore and Jon Fisher return to McClain Gallery with another terrific installation that's mysterious, funny, genius and creepy. Inside a series of wall-mounted "sculptures" (actually miniature soundstages), tiny automated cameras capture imagery that's edited, scored and screened all at once, in real time. The plot is a Lynchian mystery: A sinister trailer in the woods hides a supernatural secret ... maybe. But that's just one layer of this wild multimedia onion. In the video above, Shore and Fisher talk with Houston Public Media's Troy Schulze.

<http://www.classical917.org/articles/1386612746-jeff-shore-and-jon-fisher-trailer.html>